A Place For Violence

A PLACE FOR VIOLENCE
KEVIN WIGNALL

Synopsis

[SHORT STORY] A beautiful spa resort in Bali attracts a varied group of western tourists. There's Luke Williams, a young American who's been left in a wheelchair by a drunk driver. Then there's Brian Tully, a wise-cracking bully with connections in Vegas, together with his sheepish family. And finally there's Dan Borowski, an Australian security analyst. Trouble is, Dan isn't there to relax, and though they don't yet know it, nor are any of the others... This short story first appeared in "Storyglossia" in May 2008. Dan Borowski first appeared as a character in Wignall's novel, "For the Dogs".

Customer Reviews

This is a good short story. I wish it was longer. It would have made a great full length book. This character also appeared in "A Hunters Prayer" and I really like him. I hope Mr. Wignall writes a book about this character specifically or makes this a prelude to a future story. Overall it is very good writing, like most of his stories.

Well thought out characters and dialog. Short but gets to the point. Kind of like "The Professional", a hitman who has more behind the scenes.

Well written story with an intriguing premise and some twists. This short story alone could make me get hooked on this author.

Wignall does it again with another great short story. Really liked the main character, a hit man with a heart.

There is no way I can say anything about this short story without spoiling some part of it so i WILL NOT !You will be glad you read it I guarantee
